“Jesus is Lord” is one of the earliest confessions of faith in the Church (1 Corinthians 12:3). Confessing “Jesus is Lord” was the same as confessing that Jesus is the God of the Old Testament. When the Lord swore to deliver his people from their slavery he promised to do it with “an outstretched arm.” At the crossing of the Red Sea the outstretched arm was the arm of Moses holding the staff of God over the waters. But redemption with an outstretched arm looked forward to a different arm, a worse slavery, and a better salvation.

Jesus’ arm was outstretched on the cross to save his people from their sins. In fact, that’s what Jesus’ name means: “The Lord saves.” He saved his people from Pharaoh in the Old Testament, and he has saved us from sin, death, and the devil in the New Testament.

December 19th

King David had received a promise from the Lord: “Your house and your kingdom shall be made sure forever before me. Your throne shall be established forever” (2 Samuel 7:16). David would always have someone to sit on the throne. And yet the kings after him departed from the Lord. Israel was taken over by foreign kings. It seemed that the great tree of David’s kingdom had been forever chopped down instead of forever established.

But even though the physical kingdom of Israel has been chopped down, the Lord’s promise stood. David’s father was named Jesse. From that stump of Jesse would come a new shoot to rule the kingdom of God’s people and fulfill the promise. That king is Jesus, who wore a crown of thorns and died as the King of the Jews. He has risen from the dead and lives forever and ever for the sake of his bride, the Church.
